MESSAGE

In this era of advancement of Information and Communication Technologies, it is the need of the hour to shift to digital means, when it comes to access to information. This is the time to facilitate the reader with information through digital platforms. In this direction, it is heartening to know that the National Medical Library is launching its new website. I am sure the restructured and updated website will provide easy access to the National Medical Library resources for the Members and other information seekers at the national and international levels.

The National Medical Library Electronic Resources in Medicine (NML-ERMED) Consortium is doing a commendable job. I am hopeful that the NML will act as repository of digital information that the healthcare sector can rely upon.

I congratulate the NML for the launch of its new website.
